

Complete System Alignment

The first step in managing the way your company's IT is handled is to create a standardization scheme to make all computers on the network act the same and ensure that all updates are complete, local virus protection is in place, all servers are configured correctly, and that the entire system as a whole functions in a uniform fashion in order to keep any abnormalities in the system from creating problems resulting in system down time and lack of productivity.